INSTRUCTIONS

All laboratories are required to post this Emergency Notification Sign in the corridor outside of each laboratory space. The sign should be posted on the wall on the same side as the official room number and just below the room number sign. If there is no room number posted, write the room number in large, easy to read numbers on the sign itself. The sign should then be posted on the wall immediately to the right of the laboratory door. The top of the sign should be no less than 5 feet and no more than 6 feet from the floor. The sign must have the name and current phone numbers of the principal investigator responsible for that lab and 2 alternate individuals with knowledge of the materials and potential hazards in that laboratory printed neatly and clearly. Emergency personnel responding after hours will use this information to contact someone who can inform them about the contents of the laboratory and any potential hazards. The individuals listed on the sign must be able to communicate clearly with emergency responders and provide them with requested information.
